ROMANIA

During recent years Romanian film industry realized a spectacular rebirth. One after another, The Death of Mr. Lăzărescu by Cristi Puiu, 12:08 East of Bucharest, by Corneliu Porumboiu, The Way I Spent the End of the World by Cătălin Mitulescu or California Dreamin', by Cristian Nemescu paved the way for the biggest success of this still very young cinema, 2007's 4 Months, 3 Weeks and 2 Days by Cristian Mungiu which won the Palme d'Or in the official competition of the Cannes International Film Festival.

Continuing the trend, Radu Muntean's third feature Boogie was selected in 2008 for Directors' Fortnight section of the Cannes International Film Festival. In 2009, Police, Adjective, the new feature by Corneliu Porumboiu, received the Un Certain Regard jury award at Cannes and in 2010, If I Want to Whistle, I Whistle, Florin Șerban's directorial debut, won the Jury Grand Prix – Silver Bear and the Alfred Bauer prize, while Andrei Ujică's The Autobiography of Nicolae Ceaușescu, Radu Muntean's Tuesday after Christmas and Cristi Puiu's Aurora, were widely considered among the best films of the year. Finally, in 2011, Cătălin Mitulescu returned to Cannes with his second feature, Loverboy, Anca Damian's animation documentary, Crulic – The Path to Beyond, was highly praised by general public and critics alike, and Adrian Sitaru conquered Locarno with Best Intentions, which won the "Best Director" and "Best Actor" awards.

Throughout all these years, the Romanian Films catalogue has been a through and through companion piece, crucial for a better, up to date understanding of our internal film production.

Without giving away too much, as far as the newest Romanian films are concerned, there are enough signs to reassure us of an almost certain continuity in terms of international and critical success and praise. Consequently, for a brief but in-depth preview of all that is to come, I'm happy to invite you to turn the page...

At the crossroads between tradition and modernity, between hi-life and low-life, between art and improvisation, between electro and gipsy music, lies this explosive and colorful video essay.

In the vein of Fatih Akin's "Crossing the Bridge", the film's power of seduction lies in the cultural contrast exposed, for better or worse, by the most famous experiment in the modern history of Romanian urban music.

AURORA

An apartment kitchen: a man and a woman discuss Little Red Riding Hood, their voices hushed, mindful of waking the little girl sleeping next room. Waste land on the city outskirts: behind a line of abandoned trailers, the man silently watches what seems to be a family. Troubled by obscure thoughts, he drives across the city to a destination known only to him.

SOMETHING GOOD OUT OF LIFE

CEVA BUN DE LA VIAȚĂ

Mateo and Ginel are two friends who grew up in an orphanage in Jiu Valley, one of the poorest regions in the European Union. Their dream is to go to America, but they have to do something to raise the money for doing that. “Something Good out of Life” is the story of friendship, love and dreams that seem dangerously frail in this cold and rough place, but, alas, hope prevails as the characters try to find their place amidst the chaos of early 90’s Romania. Although far from a preferred option, Mateo and Ginel take up jobs as miners as the first step towards their great escape. The dark corridors that greet them at first will lead them to a roller coaster ride of surprises, decisions and actions as they try to make their way out from a life and place as claustrophobic as the mines themselves, finding and losing ideals, money and love in the process.
